U.S. Energy Savings Corp. Shares the Warmth in Chicago

U.S. Energy Savings Corp. donates $15,000 to The Salvation Army Energy Assistance Program in Chicago Ill.

Chicago, Ill, November 13, 2008- As the cold winds of winter start to sweep in, U.S. Energy Savings Corp. announced today that it is donating $15,000 to The Salvation Army Share the Warmth program. The program provides assistance to thousands of eligible gas consumers. The program originally started in 1983 and is one of the largest of its kind in the nation.

“This generous donation from U.S. Energy Savings Corp. goes a long way toward helping us fulfill our mission to help some of our neediest neighbors stay warm this winter,” said Lt. Colonel David E. Grindle, Divisional Commander of The Salvation Army Metropolitan Division.

According to The Salvation Army, the donation will allow for approximately 75 additional families to receive help with their heating costs. In total, more than 10,000 families benefit from the Energy Assistance Program throughout the Chicago area, Northern Illinois and Northwestern Indiana.

“Thanks to the tireless efforts of The Salvation Army, many of the Chicago area’s residents in need will be able to keep the heat on during what is expected to be a very harsh winter. We are proud to support The Salvation Army’s efforts to make and keep Chicago area residents warm over the cold months,” said Ken Hartwick, Chief Executive Officer of the Energy Savings Group, parent of U.S. Energy Savings Corp.
